The 2017 Revaluation is upon us. The draft rating lists have been published, as too are the UBR and transitional arrangements. But the big talk is of Check Challenge and Appeal. Controversial (CCA) and unwelcome but the regulations will govern how the rating practitioners and the Valuation Office Agency (VOA) must engage. Even more importantly, the regulations will set out how the VTE will deal with cases and apply "reasonable professional judgement".

If you deal with rating, this is your must attend event of the year.

The event will be followed by drinks and canapés to allow time for networking

It is therefore no surprise that the focus of this year's National Rating Day will be CCA. It is completely different to the present system, and has elements which will be difficult to implement but it is down to rating practitioners and the VOA to make it work. The regulations are the key and they will form a particular focus of the conference.

The 17th National Rating Day will also focus upon other current topics, in particular, important recent case law. The Supreme Court case of – Monk v Newbigin (VO) – has been heard and the decision should be in the public domain. The Court of Appeal decision in the case of Iceland v Berry (VO) is out and along with the ATM and other cases currently in the Upper Tribunal (Lands Chamber), may have important impacts. The National Rating Day has become a tradition in the rating world where practitioners attend to be updated on current topics, network and contribute to help shape changes for the future. Speakers represent the private sector, the (VOA) and the Valuation Tribunal Service (VTS).

The conference is always popular – attracting over 300 practitioners. If you are involved in rating work, this is the event that is said to be too important to miss.
